The committee, of whom all are residents of this section, are desirous of getting the sasistance of the young ladice in the canwas, as is done by the ladies of the other sections of the city. The infantry never forgets a favor, especially when it comes from the female friends of the corps, and these who desire to have their names placed on the large list of the remembered had better avail themselves of this opportunity and help the boysout. The young man who is undecided as to his proposed New Year's gift could not do better than to hand his sweetheart a programme from this ball, as they are to be made of an exquisite design. The corps expect to realize no less than $5,000 on this ball.

The runeral of Miss Nellie Huiton took place from $1.000 on this ball.

The "Little Violets." a colored social organization, gave an entertainment and hop at Congress Heil last night. There was a large attendance and plenty of fun all round until about midnight, when Edward Green, a small-sized black managelied out to John Young, a muscular fellow, "Don't set near dat gal." At this time Young was sitting in close proximity to Green's girl, but he arose and made for Green. The latter squared himself and the two began to strike out, utterly disregarding the Marquis of Queenberry rules. The fight had progressed some time, when it was suggested that they go out in the street and "have it out," This suited both beliggerent and they went out and stripped off all superfluous clothing and were banging each other in good style, when Officers Blankord and Emoot came along and arrested them. Green had one of his fingers chewed off and was otherwise badly hurt. Young will nurse a bastered head and bruised body.

AN ARISTOCRATIC FOX-HUNT

there by a mounted policeman, one of Major Dye's picked men.

The fox-honters were most of them on thoroughbreds, but not so the policeman. There were no scariet coats, few buckskin pantatoons and no trumpeter, but there were twelve handsome gentlemen, with whip: and spurs, and busily engaged in trying to look compositable and hands on that horses.

sweive handsome gentlemen, with whips and spurs, and busily engaged in trying to look comfortable and happy on their horses.

There was a pervading air of asdaes about the group, however, which the reporter very ignorantly sacribed to the interference of the humans sectety. When he intimated this idea to one of the huntemen he was severely snuthed.

"Naw," replied the gallant horsoman, "that's not it sat all, donn't ye knaw. We donn't gat about the beastly society, but we haven't gotany fox, donn't ye answ."

The reporter knew that a very wide-awake and pretty little gray fox had been on exhibition for a week in the window of an F-street restaurant which was to have been the object of to-day's chase, but he was informed that somebody let the fox escape in transferring it to a sack in which it was to have been carried to the point from which it was proposed to liberate it.

"What will you do about it?" queried the ignorant scribe.

"Why we will go out into Maryiand and get the hounds and then ride around in search of a real wild fox. We won't be very apt to find one, but it will be a sure enough hunt."

Another hunteman declined to answer any inquiries.

"The reporters have done enough damage already," he explained; "they have scared the ladies off and spoiled the fun to a great extent."

This statement was not entirely correct, however, for when the party had ridden from the Arlington to the Portland they found three ladies in ridding habits and on beautiful horses awaiting them.

With this important addition the party dies in riding habits and on beautiful horses awaiting them.

With this important addition the party made their way northward for the country at an easy canter with the unfortunate policeman keeping in sight at a trot.

General Beale's meadow was the starting point originally agreed upon, and it was to that vicinity that the hunters started in quest of their hounds. There was considerable difficulty in ascertaining the names of the participants, but it was said that the Misses Bayard, Fendleton and Myers were the ladies, while the gentlement, either in the party or expected to join it, included Messra. Edward C. Biunt, E. K. Goldsborough, G. R. Tonnikins, Henry G. Dulaney, Dr. Darting, Wm. Eustis, Captain De la Chew, Lieutenant Emory, Hal Dulaney, Daniel Dulaney, Major Armes, Messrs. Mr. E. C. Blunt was mounted on a splendid thoroughbred, as were many of the others, including the ladies.

Mr. Tompkins was disgusted because after getting his favorite mare in prime condition she had gone lame and he had to hire a mag. General Beverly Robertson was one of the critical spectators at the start, and as an equine expert he seemed well pleased with the appearance of the party.

When the nunting party passed out of the city limits they were prepared for a day of sport of whatever character was practicable.

It is fox could be secured they would liberate him on the Beale estate and chase him, and if this could not be done they would start the hounds on a hunt that might lead them through the surrounding country or even into Virginia.

They all laughed at the idea of interference from the S. P. C. A.

All Testimony for the Swaim Court to be in by Saturday Night.

An agreement has partially been entered into between the counsel in the Swaim Court. Martial by which all the testimony shall; be put in by Saturday next, when an adjournment will be taken until January 2. Upon reassembling the counsel will begin argument. When the court reassembled this morning Joreph McDonald, chief clerk of the Judge-Advocate-General's Office, continued his testimony relative to his knowledge of the brainess relations between his chief, General Swaim, and Mr. Bateman.

On cross-examination the witness told all about his army life, and said that he had been dismissed from the police force of New York for drunkenness. Winness acknowledged that he had seelsted the defense for two days after the beginning of the trial, and also that after he had been summoned by the Judge-Advocate as a witness. He hung around the deor of the court-room listening to the tested the conversations he alleged to have overheard between Bateman and Judge Johnson, the latter acting for General Swaim.

"Ex-robel as I am—a robel as our fathers were 100 years ago—a robel as long as the war lasted—I am as great a lover of the Union and of the Star-Spangled Sanner as ever you saw in your life. [Applause.] It needed the triumph of the Democratic party to bring true unity to the people again. All the great principles of liberty were trampled under foot by the Republican party. Thank dod the rule of that party is over forsver."

Representative E. John Ellis said in his speech: "Hen Butler is dead, but I fear he is not sensible of it. And Belva—well, when we need a woman President we'll come down into Maryland and seek a candidate among the Carrolls and Howards. St. John has been must in efficient and flowards. can wedding, says a Brooklyn paper, where the correcting parties hie away soon after the coremony, was a social event last evening in German society in this city, conducted in true Teutonic fashion. The hymoneal festivities began early in the evening, and continued unabated until daybreak next morning. At the conclusion of the coremony the company walked in couples from the house to the casho adoloning, and sat down at the banqueting tables in the pariors upstairs. In the centre of the room was a long table laden with wedding presents and flowers. The collation having been served, the chief orator of the evening read an original poem in his native language, dodicated to the bride.

At midnight the party assembled in the concert hall, and denoting and merry-making oran, it had not proceeded long whan the guests were made aware that they were in the midst of a driving snow-scorm. Large white flases were mysteriously failing from above, and the floor was soon covered with a snowy matting. In the distance was heard the marrying of approaching sieigh bells. The danove stopped in amazement, and the bride, clinging to her husband, anxiously awasted an explanation of the brilliant transformation scene. As if by magic the folding-doors rolled back, and a flery black steer, rightly caparisoned, galloped into the hall drawlog an elegant albeary cutter.

The turnout made the circle of the room reversal times amid the rousing cheers of the guests. The bride and groom were invited to a seat in the steigh, which, in a few appropriate words, was presented to them. A short wedding-ride was taken, followed by a shower of imaginary enowballs. The affair was decidedly unique and nevel, and was a genuine surprise to all save the donors of the gift.

Kansas Republicantsm.

Hansas Republicans of Kansas have forwarded to Mr. Bisine and General Logan copies of the following resolution:

Resolved, That we renow our featity to the malying principles of the National Republican party, and desire to convey to our galliant sinnardi-bearers, Hon. James G. Bisins and General John A. Logad, an expression of our confidence and esteem: that we regard Blaine and Logan as private citizens as higher and better representatives of American manhood than any official representative of the Democratic party; that we recognize in James G. Blaine the greatest living representative of American Republicanism and tender to him our carnest thanks for his manly, aggressive campaign for Republican supremacy. That Kansas, the first born chind of Republicanism, again ploages her iddelity to Republican principles, and in the future as in the past, Kansas will march at the head of the Republican column, giving more Republican than any other State.

Boyard and the Treasury. An apparently inspired dispatch from Albany says that Senstor Bayard has informed Grover Cleveland that he will accept the Secretaryship of the Treasury. It is known here that Senstor Bayard can have a place in the Cabinet if he wants it. It has, however, been thought that President-elect Cleveland would rather have Mr. Bayard in the State Department. But the general impression here is that he can have whatever pisce he likes, and that if he has said that he wants the Treasury portfolio it will be ble.
